Chillicothe Woman Killed In Wreck

FATAL CRASH—Deputy Robert Hoover Dorsey Boyle became the county's fifth questions witnesses at the scene of a fatal traffic fatality of the year. Hoover said seat accident in South Bloomfield Friday. Mrs. belts may have prevented the fatal injuries.

Mrs. Dorothy I. Boyle, 65, Chillicothe, died of injuries sustained in a 2-car collision in the village of South Bloomfield 1:10 p.m. Friday.

Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Robert Hoover stated that Mrs. Boyle may not have been killed in the accident had her seat belt been fastened.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, Dorsey A. Boyle, 76, Chillicothe. They were returning from a shopping trip in Columbus when they decided to stop at a fruit and vegetable stand in South Bloomfield, Hoover was told by Mr. Boyle.

Witnesses to the accident said that Boyle turned left in front of a northbound car driven by Julia May Bland, 38, of Waverly. There were no skidmarks on the pavement, indicating that neither driver saw the other vehicle until it was too late to hit the brakes.

Mrs. Boyle, the fifth traffic fatality in Pickaway County this year, died of severe neck and head injuries. She was dead on arrival at Berger Hospital emergency room.

Her husband was treated and released from the emergency room for head and chest injuries.

Mrs. Bland sustained a laceration of the left lower leg and contusion and lacerations of the head. Her 11-year-old son, John Richard Bland, sustained a laceration of the knee. They were both treated and released by the Berger Hospital emergency staff.

Hoover noted that seat belts in the Bland car were apparently not being used and could perhaps have prevented the injuries to Mrs. Bland and her son.

Assisting Hoover with the investigation were deputies James Fite, James Deal and Warren Straley. The accident is still under investigation.

The sheriff's department investigated two other accidents during the night resulting in minor injuries to the drivers of the two cars involved.

Terry Lee Frazier, 19, Angola, Ind., lost control of his auto on Trimmer Road in Washington Twp. 2:30 a.m. today. He sustained a bump on the head. His car was heavily damaged. Deputy Billy Huffman investigated.

Larry Gilbert Tolliver, 24, 512 Tower Court, was charged with driving while intoxicated following an accident on Route 56 near the Morris-Salem Road at 9:40 p.m. Tolliver failed to negotiate a curve, went off the roadway for 465 feet coming to a halt in a field. He was referred to a doctor for treatment. Deputy J. Philip Brown was the investigating officer.

Penal System Draws Criticism

TIFFIN, Ohio (AP)—U.S. District Court Judge Charles R. Richey of Washington, D.C., says the penal system is one of this country's "most decayed and destructive institutions."

Speaking at a Heidelberg College conference on court powers and policymaking Friday, Judge Richey said the entire correctional system "is in need of drastic reconstruction."

He said he recently toured 11 federal prisons.

cluding three stewardesses, left the craft. Two uniformed airline employees and a civilian then entered the plane, and quickly departed. Police surrounded the craft briefly, then they too left.

The gunmen hijacked the Colombian airliner on a domestic flight Wednesday and in the next two days forced two sets of pilots to fly to Panama and Aruba, then on to Ecuador, Peru, Argentina, Paraguay and back to Argentina.

Molina, a Colombian, volunteered to board the plane in Aruba to relieve Capt. Jorge Lucena, the original pilot.

The hijackers' first demand was the release of 140 Colombian prison inmates. But the Colombian government said no. The next demand was $160,000. After flying about Central America and the Caribbean for a day, they finally received $50,000 in Aruba from a representative of SAM, the airline which owns the plane.

There were 86 passengers and crew aboard when the gunmen seized the aircraft. But the two hijackers let a few leave the plane at each stop, and others escaped.

Marathon Skyjack Comes To End; 2 Leftists Flee

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Two masked gunmen who crisscrossed 15,000 miles of Latin America in a record airline hijacking finally managed to escape today, but they got only $50,000 for their trouble.

Their escape became known after the exhausted pilot, Capt. Hugo Molina, landed the airliner in Buenos Aires.

Molina said the hijackers had made off with the money in Resistencia, an Argentine city 500 miles north of here. They escaped into the sparsely settled Chaco region in a pickup truck, he told newsmen.

"The hijackers ordered me to fly to Resistencia and threatened to kill the stewardesses if I refused," Molina said. "In Resistencia they fled in a pickup truck provided by the local police. I don't know where they went."

The next stop after Resistencia was Asuncion, Paraguay, 15 minutes' flying time away, then to Buenos Aires, a 3½-hour hop.

Molina taxied his airliner to an air force terminal at the Buenos Aires Airport and cut his motors. The door opened, and six crew members, in-

Skylab Crew Plans To Free Solar Panel

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Skylab's astronauts returned to their research today while ground experts considered a space walk to free a jammed solar panel and the possibility of extending the mission beyond 28 days.

Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz were relaxed after a day off Friday in which they took man's first space showers, a welcome relief after eight days of work in the warm space station.

Today also marked Commander Conrad's 43rd birthday.

On the schedule were a series of sun and star observations, more medical investigations and an earth resources pass to make geologic, agricultural and oceanograph surveys in a 2,750-mile strip ranging from northwest of San Francisco to Mexico City.

In space laboratories here and at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., specialists are testing repair techniques which might be used by the astronauts.

A sun shield ripped away during the launch of Skylab on May 14 and one solar panel was torn away and another jammed.

If the jammed panel could be swung out, its solar cells would almost double the amount of electrical power available to the space station, which has been running on half-power since the launch accident.

Four smaller solar panels are providing energy for the laboratory. But on reduced power, the astronauts have had to curtail some experiments.

Rocco A. Petrone, director of the Marshall Center where testing is being conducted, said if the jammed panel could be released, there's a possibility the mission could be extended beyond the planned four weeks. This would permit the spacemen to make up for some of the experiments lost in this early phase of the flight.

"It's certainly worth looking at," Petrone said. He added much would depend on what doctors on the ground think of the astronauts' physical condition late in the journey. They would consult with Kerwin, who is the first physician to fly in space.

Petrone said the space walk panel repair job has received greater emphasis since it was discovered some of the station batteries were degraded by solar heat during the 10 days the lab was unmanned after it was launched.

The astronauts were to have been launched the next day, but were delayed while a makeshift sun shade was developed for them to erect over an exposed area of the vehicle to cool it down.

As a result of the battery degradation, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Friday it had advanced the launch date of the Skylab 2 astronauts 14 days, from Aug. 8 to July 27.

"It's a precautionary move," Petrone reported.

The Skylab 3 mission, scheduled for a November launching to the same station, also probably will be earlier. These last two crews are to remain aboard Skylab for 56 days each.

Petrone said a space walk could come as early as Tuesday, but felt it more likely would be later in the week.

He said the astronauts would open a

New York Harbor Collision Kills 6

NEW YORK (AP)—An American container vessel rammed into a Belgian tanker early today in New York Harbor near the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, setting both ships ablaze amid a series of explosions.

Authorities reported at least six persons dead, including the captain of the American ship. More than 20 were reported injured among 68 known survivors. Four crewmen were listed as missing.

The suspension bridge at the harbor's entrance was closed temporarily when the burning ships drifted underneath, with flames leaping hundreds of feet into the sky over the strait between Brooklyn and Staten Island.

The dead captain was identified as William Patterson of Clifton, N.J. Police said he suffered an apparent heart attack after the collision.

Fireboats and police launches cut through a flaming oil slick to rescue crewmen from the container ship, the Sea Witch, and the 699-foot tanker Esso Brussels. Firemen continued battling the conflagration as the ships drifted farther into the outer harbor.

A survivor from the Sea Witch, David Bracy, 31, of Bar Harbor, Maine, who was in the ship's engine room at the time of the collision, said: "I think we lost our steering gear."

Bracy, who suffered arm burns, said crewmen clustered at a spot on the ship's afterdeck before being rescued by a fireboat.

Another crew member aboard the American ship, Michael O'Connor, 20, of West Orange, N.J., said: "There were flames on the ship and in the water—we couldn't jump. Some of us were trapped in a passageway."

More than a thousand residents lined the Brooklyn shore near the bridge to watch as helicopters, tugs, police launches, fireboats and ambulances responded to the emergency.

One man who reported seeing the vessels collide said: "I heard a boat horn sounding for a minute before... I saw a fireball."

Another witness said: "There were numerous explosions within the big fire—several as the ships went under the bridge."

"There was a tremendous roaring sound all the time—it almost smothered conversation on the shore," he said.

The blaze broke out about 12:45 a.m. when the Sea Witch slammed into the Esso Brussels amidship while the tanker was anchored in the Narrows just north of the bridge, according to Edwin Sheppard, chief fire marshal for the city.

Sheppard said the Sea Witch "veered into the Brussels."

"Just prior to when it hit, the cargo vessel sounded the general alarm, which probably saved a lot of lives," Sheppard said.

A survivor from the tanker said it was carrying 40,000 tons of crude oil due to be offloaded at Bayonne, N.J. The container ship was en route to Norfolk, Va.

Wheat Price Rigging Probed

WASHINGTON (AP)—An Agriculture Department investigation into alleged price rigging during last summer's grain sales to Russia has been turned over to the Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution.

A Justice spokesman Friday confirmed that the department's criminal fraud division had been given the results of the investigation conducted by the Commodity Exchange Authority.

The CEA, a branch of the Agriculture Department, oversees the nation's commodity markets. For the past nine months it has been checking reports that grain-futures traders might have rigged prices on the Kansas City commodity market last July so they could qualify for larger government export subsidies.

There was no immediate indication what, if anything, the CEA probe had disclosed. Dr. Alexander Swantz, associate administrator of CEA, said only that the findings had been forwarded "for further investigation."

The CEA probe is the second investigation into allegations of price manipulation concerning the grain deal. The Kansas City Board of Trade, which runs the market, conducted its own investigation but found no wrongdoing.

The investigation centered on the possibility that traders may have raised the closing price of wheat by placing large purchase orders just before the market closed each day. Since the government figured its export subsidies on the basis of the previous day's closing prices, a higher closing price meant a bigger subsidy the following day.

In a two month period—from July 3 to Aug. 31—the price of wheat at Kansas City jumped 44 cents per bushel. The export subsidy rose 42 cents.

The Agriculture Department originally estimated it would pay out $67 million in export subsidies last summer. Instead it paid out $300 million.

The subsidies, designed to make American grain competitive on the world market, are no longer in effect. The Agriculture Department discontinued them last September after deciding to let the world price of wheat find its own level.

Officials Claim Summit Success

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House is making a determined effort to dispel notions that President Nixon's summit talks with French President Georges Pompidou were anything less than a total success.

As President Nixon flew here Friday from two days of talks with Pompidou in Iceland, his assistant Henry A. Kissinger told reporters aboard the plane, "We achieved what we set out to do."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, chatting separately with reporters, was similarly confident, saying: "It went very well. It lived up to our expectations."

Kissinger, who has rarely voiced serious criticism of the news media, contended "the press had the wrong image" about the Reykjavik talks. Some newsmen who covered the summit, on the other hand, came away with the impression that French officials had done a more zealous job of providing information about the discussions.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Zielger said the summit was never designed to produce agreements on such knotty problems as trade, monetary reform, the wisdom of a super summit of the Atlantic community or adoption of a "new Atlantic charter."

Kissinger said Nixon had achieved a goal of setting up procedures for negotiations aimed at reshaping and modernizing the alliance, including a deputy foreign ministers conference that could be held as early as July "to pull all these things together."

As Nixon left Iceland, one French spokesman was telling reporters the meeting of deputy foreign ministers would involve only France and the United States.

Kissinger said, however, he was "absolutely certain" that when the French "study the records" of the Reykjavik summit they will see that their spokesman was not well informed.

Medical Watch Set For POWs

WASHINGTON (AP)—A five-year medical watch program for returned Indochina POWs has been drafted by the Pentagon in hopes of avoiding the high rate of violent deaths experienced by U.S. POWs of World War II and Korea.

Dr. Richard S. Wilbur, the Pentagon's top health officer, said Friday that all 566 returned U.S. POWs suffered what doctors call "stress reaction" after coming home. He said, however, these manifestations of depression, fright and euphoria "will not last with them."

U.S. servicemen "did badly in the first three years" after leaving Japanese prison camps in World War II and Korean camps in the Korean war, Wilbur said.

A high rate of trauma during that period resulted in suicides, murders and accidental deaths, Wilbur told newsmen.

Military doctors earlier this year reported that the death rate of World War II POWs who returned from Japanese prisons averaged 50 per cent higher than the American population. The post-Korean rate was reported comparable.

"We will counsel the men and all their families" to avoid a post-Vietnam repetition, Wilbur said.

He said the Vietnam war POW "needs a lot of help fitting back into the family." Many a POW finds that his family has been "getting along pretty well without him," he said.

The POW asks to see the checkbook and takes over the family car and "the wife feels she's been put back in the home," Wilbur said. As a result, he said, the returned POW "feels himself kind of extra."

Wilbur also said that nearly one-third of the POWs, principally Air Force and Navy pilots, had suffered major fractures, including back injuries, after ejecting from stricken aircraft.

In a report on injuries and diseases found among the POWs, Wilbur said that some "probably will not ever be able to go back to active duty, but the vast majority will."

'Duck Crossing' Signs Installed At Park

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—"Duck Crossing" signs have been installed along roads in Hamilton County's Winton Woods Park because of migrating ducks and geese.

The birds congregate around the harbor point there and park rangers said motorists should be reminded of the 25 m.p.h. and low flying ducks.

Anthracnose Attacks Sycamore Trees

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

Almost every year several types of shade trees are affected by a disease that is strikingly noticeable because of its effect on the foliage. Many homeowners become concerned, particularly if it is a large tree or one that was recently planted and are fearful that the affected tree will die.

This disease, known as anthracnose, or sometimes leaf blight, affects primarily maple, sycamore and oak, the latter two being most susceptible.

Exceptionally wet seasons usually favor this disease. Symptoms vary among species of trees, however, dead areas in the foliage are common for all. Several symptoms appear on sycamore, the early leaf blight stage that completely kills young leaves and shoots and may be confused with frost injury early in the season, and the later stage that develops as small to large, irregular brown areas adjacent to and centering around diseased spots on the midribs and lateral veins of mature leaves and twig cankers.

Anthracnose is caused by several closely related fungi. These fungi live over on fallen leaves and in cankers formed on small branches. When temperatures, and especially moisture are favorable in the spring, the particular fungus produces spores which infect new developing leaves. The particular fungi associated with sycamore are Gnomonia platani. In many cases small light colored spore masses appear on the diseased underside portions of the leaf. These are fruiting bodies of the fungus.

Some of the suggested control practices are:

1. Rake and burn leaves and infected twigs in the fall to reduce the inoculum.

2. The decision whether to spray or not depends on the availability of pressure spray equipment and the value placed on the trees.

3. The defoliation caused by anthracnose will not result in lasting damage to the trees unless it occurs year after year. Continued defoliation weakens the trees and often makes them unsightly. If damage is frequent and serious enough to justify control, several chemical fungicides may be applied to reduce damage from the disease. Application of these materials is timely and requires high pressure spray equipment if success is to be obtained on large trees. Home garden sprayers may be used on small, recently planted trees.

4. At least three applications are necessary with most fungicides beginning early in the spring. The first spray should be applied in the dormant stage before the buds open to kill the overwintering stage of the fungus on the branches of the trees. A second spray should be applied in the delayed dormant stage when the buds are showing green at the tip. A third spray should be applied just as the new leaves develop. Since the fungicide acts as a protectant, very little control may be expected if the sprays are put on when symptoms are visible. Spraying after the disease is present will only protect new healthy leaves.

5. Fungicides to use are Ferbam, Zineb, or Bordeaux.

6. Recently transplanted trees should be sprayed to protect new foliage. Fertilize trees to improve vigor.

There's no denying that, when we need it, we all like to fix up the old place with a new roof, or a new porch, new storm windows, or new siding.

Recent investigations by the Federal Trade Commission suggest, however, that we should proceed with caution in going ahead with important improvements. Generally speaking, the bugs are not in the products but in the sales methods. And the sales methods sometimes lead us to do things we didn't mean to do. Like paying a bigger price than we can afford.

Our friends the Smiths were not really planning to put new siding on their house, though they admitted it would be nice to have it, when the salesman came calling. "Why, Mr. Smith, you're going to have carefree living here, from now on, no more painting, no more repair. This siding is good for a lifetime. Our products and installations are guaranteed for 20 to 50 years." This sounds very good to Mr. Smith. "And this is going to cost you a very small piece of change," the salesman continues, "because we've chosen your house to be a Model Demonstrator Home. Mr. Smith, you've got such an attractive place here that when we've put the siding on it this lovely home is going to sell siding for us, and this will be worth real money to you, because we're going to give you a nice fat bonus for every job we get as a result of showing your home. You won't have to do a thing."

After a good many more words to this effect, the salesman has his papers out, ready for the signing. Mr. Smith is a little rocked when he sees what the new siding is going to cost, but the salesman is right there: "I'll tell you what, Mr. Smith," he says as he lowers his voice, "you're really getting a special price as it is, but I'll take the responsibility for giving you a further reduction, which I am allowed to do in a few special cases. How does that sound? There now, you just sign here and I'll take care of everything. You'll never feel these small payments. Our expert workmen will be here in the morning. It's been very nice talking with you folks."

Cautious consumers know what's wrong in this picture. They know the promise of a 20-50 year — or a lifetime — guarantee is deceptive because it's unreasonable to expect the siding to be trouble-free for 20-50 years and to expect the company will be in existence to make good on the guarantee "for a lifetime." Cautious consumers also know that the "model demonstrator home" pitch rarely pans out. And they are not impressed with the salesman who says: "This is a special price just for you." They could tell the Smiths that when they are good and ready to have new siding put on (or make some other substantial improvement), they should shop around, compare prices, carefully read printed guarantees, and make their decision without too much help from the salesman.

Late Corn Planting May Hurt Ohioans

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio Agriculture Director Gene Abercrombie says late corn planting could cause soaring meat prices in the state "unless we get some relief from the weather."

Abercrombie Thursday blamed steady rain for what he predicted would be the "worst corn crop in 20 years," if bad weather continues through next week.

And So It Grows

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

When you go shopping for lawn fertilizer, you find "umpteen" different brands, analyses, and prices, not to mention slow release or fast release nitrogen and with or without pesticides. Confusing? It certainly is for those of us who want to see our lawns green up and look pretty.

But there are good reasons for the wide variety of materials . . . and the wide variety of prices they create. Fertilizers containing a high percentage of plant nutrients — nitrogen, phosphoric oxide and potash — cost more per pound than those with a low percentage of nutrients. Those containing slowly available forms of nitrogen cost more per pound than those with quickly available forms. Granular, pelleted or soluble fertilizers cost more than powdered fertilizers.

A fertilizer also costs more if it has pesticides or trace elements such as iron, Manganese, zinc, copper, cobalt, sulfur or chlorine added.

Package size counts, too. Fertilizer in a small container costs more per pound than the same product in a large container. So before you buy, you'll have to decide if the expensive products are worth the extra price. Maybe the least expensive is good enough for your needs. After all, how much encouraging do crabgrass and dandelions need?

If mosquitoes think you are delicious and fleas prefer you to your dog, better make yourself repellent to these pests before going tramping or sitting in the outdoors this summer.

Arm yourself with a repellent or space spray. There are repellents you can apply to skin and clothing and repellents you apply to clothing only.

A good one to use against most insects is deet, which is short for its official chemical name — N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide. The name alone would repel an ordinary bug. Deet is very effective for most folks and repels more kinds of biting insects, ticks and mites than other repellents.

Be aware of the difference between repellents and insecticides. You can use an insecticide to spray the space outdoors where you will be to reduce the number of flies, mosquitoes and gnats in the air. Space sprays usually remain effective for at least 30 minutes, sometimes longer. Sprays for use in space are clearly labeled for use against flying insects. Do not spray on drinking water, food, dishes, people, clothes, trees or shrubs.

Repellents are okay for skin and clothes. Insecticides are not.

The next meeting will be at the Commercial Point United Methodist Church on June 14, 1973, at 7 p.m.

Plant Populations Influence Yield

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

On thousands of Ohio farms, corn plants are, or soon will be, standing up in long green rows that stretch across the fields. Just how many plants stand in each row will greatly influence this fall's corn yields, says Lawrence Shepherd, Extension Agronomist at The Ohio State University.

Low populations in Ohio result in low yield potential and profit in corn production, Shepherd insists. Most Ohio fields have too few plants to produce the highest possible yields.

The agronomist notes that up through 1967 plant populations in Ohio were usually below 15,000 plants per acre. Since then, populations have increased each year, except in 1970, up to an average plant stand of 18,400 last year. He adds that of the more than 250 hybrids listed in the 1972-73 Ohio Agronomy Guide, only about 4 per cent are recommended at populations as low as 18,000 plants per acre.

Although it is too late to do much about the 1973 plant populations in corn fields, now is a good time to plan for 1974. A good place to start is by checking this year's plant stands.

One simple way to check plant stands is to measure a length of row equal to 1-1000 of an acre. Count the number of stalks in this row section and multiply by 1000. Check several sections of row and take the average. What distance of row equals 1-1000 of an acre? The distance varies with row spacing as follows:

For 40-inch rows, 13 feet, 1 inch equals 1-1000 of an acre.

For 30-inch rows, 17 feet, 4 inches equals 1-1000 of an acre.

For 20-inch rows, 26 feet, 2 inches equals 1-1000 of an acre.

For rows narrower than 40 inches, add 4 inches lengthwise for each inch the row width is less than 40 inches.

For rows wider than 40 inches, subtract 4 inches for length for each inch the row width is more than 40 inches. (This information is in the 1972-73 Agronomy Guide, Extension Bulletin 472.)

The most important thing, Shepherd claims, is to remember 13 feet, 1 inch for 40-inch rows and adjust by 4 inches length each 1-inch difference in width.

The agronomist notes some of the common problems in obtaining an adequate stand:

1. The most serious problem appears to be planting too deep.

2. Another factor is not dropping enough seed in the first place.

3. There is usually about a 15 per cent loss in emergence from the seed drop, so the planter should be set to drop 10 to 20 per cent more seed than the desired plant stand.

4. Errors — some as high as a third difference — in seed drop may produce unsatisfactory stands. Obtain the proper plate for the seed and check the actual drop with the planter manual.

Speed of travel is important for standard row widths, according to Shepherd. He suggests driving not more than 4 miles per hour with 24-cell plates and not more than 3 miles per hour with 16-cell plates. Depth of planting is also very important. Corn planted more than 1-1/2 inches in late April or early May may have problems in emerging because of thick crusts and below-normal temperatures. Crust may be more of a problem when temperatures are high because of rate of growth.

Regardless of the plant population, Shepherd advises farmers to check their corn fields now for injury from insects such as flea beetles, cut worms, grubs, wire worms, and others that can reduce yields. Early treatment may prevent serious damage.

Insect Alerts

By GEORGE HAMRICK
County Extension Agent,
Agriculture

If you go outside some morning and find that your maple tree has suddenly lost many of its leaves, take a look at the petiole. That's the little stem on the leaf. If it is about 1 inch long and kind of black on the end chances are you have maple petiole borer. This is a tiny insect that bores into the petiole and the weight of the leaf breaks the petiole and they both come tumbling down. Simplest control is not to do anything. The tree will be alright.

Maple bladder galls occur commonly on silver maple trees. The galls are globular and are located on the upper surface of the leaves.

When first formed, the galls may be pink or green but they often become bright red and later almost black.

The gall maker is an eriophyid mite that is approximately 1-125 inch in length. The mites live during the winter in the crevices in the bark of maple trees and crawl to the leaves when the new growth appears in the spring. They feed on the lower surface of the leaf by means of a sucking beak, and as a result a gall is formed on the upper surface. As the gall enlarges, a cavity forms with an opening on the lower surface of the leaf. The galls cause no appreciable damage to the tree except for the unsightly appearance.

Spraying as the buds are opening is the best control. Use Malathion.

U.S. Gives Copters To Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — The U.S. government has given the Cambodian air force "a small squadron" of helicopter gunships for close air support in tight combat situations, military sources said today.

In South Vietnam, Viet Cong sappers blew up an ammunition dump 12 miles from Saigon, injuring 10 South Vietnamese soldiers and destroying 400 tons of mortar and artillery shells, authorities reported.

A normal squadron numbers about 20 aircraft. The sources said the UH1 "Huey" gunships, equipped with miniguns and rockets, arrived in Cambodia Tuesday. They were used for the first time Wednesday, escorting convoys along the Communist-infested Mekong River supply corridor. Security considerations precluded disclosure until today.

Cambodian pilots trained in Thailand "are doing a really good job with the choppers, both flying and maintenance," one informant said. "They're doing as well as Americans would and better than the Vietnamese."

Cambodia has about 20 propeller-driven bombers, 36 Huey helicopters, 36 twin-engine transports, about a dozen spotter planes, and a new squadron of highwing monoplanes that can be used for forward air control or as gunships.

Arrival of the new gunships comes at a time when the U.S. Senate has voted to cut off all funds for continued bombing in Cambodia and Laos and when the Cambodian armed forces are undergoing a major reorganization.

Futures Market Skyrockets; Consumers To Feel Effects

CHICAGO (AP) — If you've never seen a bushel of soybeans it's hard to imagine why scores of men would be willing to pay $10 for them.

But scores of men are willing to pay that much and more for a bushel of the oily, pea-shaped beans. And many don't even know what soybeans look like.

Yet they buy and sell thousands of bushels of soybeans by dealing in commodities futures, contracts promising delivery at some future date.

Thousands, and sometimes hundreds of thousands, of dollars are won and lost daily in such dealings at the Board of Trade.

In the past few weeks, the traders have been mostly making money.

The commodities futures boom has nearly tripled the price of soybeans in a year and almost doubled that of wheat and corn.

Consumers will eventually feel the price increase at the meat counter, say many traders. The commodities bought and sold at the Board of Trade are used primarily as livestock feed.

"The farmer is getting pressure from both ends," one broker said. "He's faced with paying more and more for his feed grains, yet not being able to raise prices above the government ceiling. He has no choice but to cut production."

Soybeans are the "glamor stock" of the futures market. But other futures prices have been soaring, too.

Most traders say, with conviction, that prices are hitting record levels because the supply of food commodities simply can't keep pace with demand.

But there is another view expressed by one trader: "The only thing that's worth a damn in this country is its agriculture."

"They're not producing cameras or televisions any more in this country. Pretty soon they're not going to be making cars. Who wants to buy a 300 horsepower car that breaks down twice a week!"

Tours Of Alcatraz Prison Set By National Park Service

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "And that was Al Capone's cell, up there at the end, on the second tier."

The tour director was pointing to a steel cubicle where the late Chicago crime czar spent his years on Alcatraz, island home for 1,576 federal convicts for 29 years. It was closed in 1962.

The National Park Service, current overseers of the abandoned prison, plans to start public tours Nov. 1 after receiving thousands of requests from people curious to see the notorious penitentiary.

Behind the bars, locks, steel doors and gun walks once strode the elite of American crime. Besides Capone, there was Basil "The Owl" Banghart, Terrible Roger Touhy's triggerman; and Creepy Karpis, gunman, kidnaper and graduate of Ma Barker's Midwestern gang of the 1930s.

Reporters given a preview tour Thursday approached "The Rock" in San Francisco Bay from the west side, 2 1/2 miles from the Golden Gate Bridge. Swift currents swirl around the rocky island, generating powerful surges on the shore that were a deterrent to escape.

The island is nearly choked with the wild growths of flowers, shrubs,

Venue Shift Sought For Hoffman Trial

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Attorneys for Howard Hoffman III have renewed a request for a change of venue in his first-degree murder trial because of publicity surrounding the case.

Hoffman's trial had been moved to Trumbull County earlier this year, but the proceedings ended in a mistrial. A Lake County judge ruled earlier this month that the retrial would not be moved back to Warren.

Hoffman is charged with the shooting deaths of his parents at their Mentor home a year ago.

Cab Company Finds Gasoline More Costly

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The Yellow Cab Co. of Cleveland says it will have to pay 73.75 per cent more for bulk gasoline during the coming year.

Yellow Cab Treasurer William Klug said only one bid was received on the firm's bulk fuel contract. That bid, from last year's supplier, the Shell Oil Co., raised the price per gallon from 11.28 to 19.6 cents, he said.

grasses and trees planted over the years by the Army and later the families of guards who watched over the Alcatraz convicts. A glass greenhouse sits on a cliff nearly overgrown with weeds and has a million-dollar view of the San Francisco skyline.

Each cubicle in the cell areas measures 9-by-5 feet and is 7-feet high. Inside, inmates had a folding table and chair.

From this prison at least 25 prisoners tried to escape. Five were shot to death and at least 12 were recaptured before they made it into the water. In 1962, John Paul Scott, a Kentucky robber, made it all the way to shore — the first ever to have done it. He was recaptured.

Lifer B.J. Cat Dies In Prison

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — B.J. is gone, a lifetime served honorably behind prison walls without being charged, convicted or sentenced.

B.J., listed as Lifer 00001, now is in a tiny grave in a flowered garden tended by the men serving life terms at the Washington State Penitentiary.

A small metal plaque says simply: "B.J. The Cat, lifer. Born here, died here."

"He was a pretty good ol' cat," said lifer John Hawkins.

"There's a lot of people around here who miss him. You see a little cat walkin' along, it kind of makes you feel a little different."

B.J. showed up mysteriously as a tiny kitten inside Lifer's Acre several years ago.

Although prison rules forbid inmates to have pets, the cat, promptly named B.J., was tolerated.

B.J. just might have beaten the ground rules because the warden here is B.J. Rhay.

A few days ago, B.J. The Cat took sick.

He was taken to the veterinarian.

Nothing could be done, the vet said.

Fourteen dollars later — that was the bill — B.J. had gone to a cat's reward.

The vet's bill went to lifer Pappy Huson, who was B.J.'s cell partner.

Pappy is working it out. He's got the time.

A Page Of Opinion

No Time For Panic

There is growing interest in measures to aid in reducing dependence of the United States on imported oil, but there is no reason for panic. Yet panicky pessimism, instead of intelligent planning, is getting more and more attention.

The argument is frequently heard that North America, Western Europe and Japan will be compelled to rely heavily on the Arab nations for oil in the 1980s. That the consumer nations will run the danger of kowtowing to Arab demands on various matters or having their oil supply cut off.

There is also the corollary that though oil supply continues uninterrupted, the Arab nations will have accumulated so much foreign currency by then that they could create recurrent international monetary crises for their own ends.

Such arguments are based on statistical fallacies. They assume that a trend now running strong will continue and gather strength. The world has repeatedly seen that trends change, sometimes slowly, sometimes rapidly. It has happened in the case of population predictions, for example.

When the forecasts do not materialize, the experts offer explanations and adjust their books. All the dire predictions related to the current concern about energy shortage assume things that should not be assumed automatically. And they ignore factors that should not be ignored.

It is assumed, for example, that the Arab nations, whom unity has eluded all these years, will suddenly become united and pursue anti-Western policies. This is an unrealistic projection.

It is difficult to see how all these nations, with different aims and aspirations, different degrees of political and economic development and sophistication, could sustain a long embargo on oil shipments to the industrialized nations. And it is also difficult to imagine that if they accumulate billions in oil revenues, the money will be in banks rather than put to use in solving their own domestic problems.

Besides, there are a few moves the oil-consumer nations can make themselves that could stop the "trend" in its tracks, or slow it down so greatly that it would lose its power to alarm. In a real pinch, there could be strict rationing of oil.

Meanwhile, there could—and should—be a concerted effort to find and develop alternative sources of energy. In fact, while the alarmists are busy predicting doom, realists are already working on ways to avoid it.

Manners Have Changed

When 82-year-old Mildred West retired after 62 years as a school teacher, Miss West had set a teaching record for New Jersey public schools. Looking back over her long reign in the classroom, the veteran teacher said one condition which had certainly changed over the years was the good manners of young people.

She quickly added that "the kids are nice and helping young people to achieve is worthwhile." But it is interesting that with all the changes Miss West encountered from her early days teaching in a one-room schoolhouse to the present, a change that stands out in her mind is the demise of good manners.

It is a change readily recognizable in many fields of endeavor. Nor is the fault limited to young people. Adults have become careless about their manners, also, due in part to the more casual lifestyles which have evolved. That is not an acceptable explanation.

There is none for bad manners.

Brezhnev And His Sample

By JEFFREY HART

WASHINGTON — A number of extraordinary paradoxes surround the impending visit of Leonid Brezhnev to the United States. According to Marxist theory, for example, economics is the primary factor in social and political relations, yet though the Soviets are in deep and chronic economic difficulty — this, indeed, is a chief motive for the Brezhnev visit — they are also full of energy and enterprise politically, busy expending their global influence, imaginative and even ebullient in their approach.

In stark contrast to these so-called "determinists" and "materialists," the United States seems sunk in self-doubt, its global stance one of retreat and retrenchment.

To get some notion of Russian enterprise and inventiveness, one need only "look round the habitable world," to quote Dryden's translation of Juvenal.

During the last decade the Soviets have dramatically de-ideologized their approach to the expansion of their global influence. At the beginning of the 1960's, the Kremlin looked with deep suspicion upon governments that had not taken the path of "scientific socialism." Only such governments, and insurgencies deemed likely to issue in such governments, qualified for Soviet support.

Today all this has been largely jettisoned. The Soviet venture in Ghana fizzled with the fall of Nkrumah. The experience of Che Guevara in Bolivia and the Viet Cong in South Vietnam cast a chill over the prospects of rural guerrilla warfare. During the late 1960s, Soviet policy evolved in a more traditional, but also more formidable, direction.

Top priority is now given to the creation of client relationships with existing governments — as, in varying degree, with Cuba, India, Bangladesh, and Egypt.

Should Hanoi succeed in re-creating the former French-controlled bloc of states in Indochina, Hanoi will have been able to do so only through massive Soviet aid, and the Soviets will have established a formidable client state on the eastern rim of the Indian Ocean.

The 15-year treaty of friendship concluded by the Soviets with Iraq is an example of the new approach. The treaty contains a provision for military cooperation of an unspecified kind, and intelligence analysts point out that this is one of the techniques the Soviets are now using to funnel arms covertly to irregular forces. Thus, on one level, the Soviets are able to pursue normal state-to-state relations, while, on another level, they can funnel arms to guerrilla groups through client-state arrangements such as the ones with Iraq.

On the first level, for example, the Soviets have acquired important facilities in Mauritius, as a corollary to a fisheries agreement. They are acquiring facilities in Hodeida in the Yemen and Berbera in Somalia.

But also, in the Persian Gulf area, the Soviets are contesting the Chinese for control over PFLOAG (the Popular Front for the Liberation of the Occupied Arabian Gulf), to which Soviet aid has recently doubled. Until recently, the Mozambique insurgency known as Frelimo was Soviet-dominated; now the Chinese are active there. In South Africa, the African National Congress is a Moscow instrument, but has a Peking-leaning rival.

In this overall double strategy, the aim is either to work through governments by making them dependent on the Soviet Union, or else to support "progressive" and anti-Western movements which may not be ideologically orthodox.

In its overall design, the strategy envisages the rapid buildup of Soviet power and influence on both the eastern and western rims of the Indian Ocean, as well as the expansion of Soviet influence elsewhere. All this is backed by a spectacular ship-building program.

When Brezhnev sits down with President Nixon, therefore, he comes as the master of a serious and highly formidable global enterprise.

Speaking Of Your Health

by Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

At first glance it may seem that there is a paradox in writing about the dangers of marijuana in a column entitled "Hopeful News."

It has just been shown that marijuana has a tendency to disturb and damage the chromosomes of its users.

Dr. Morton A. Stenchever of the University of Utah said, "We have found a significant amount of chromosome damage in most users of marijuana . . . and there was not much difference in heavy users or in light users."

Dr. Stenchever believes that more intensive studies must be undertaken to emphasize this newly recognized danger.

It is my hope that marijuana users will pay heed to this hazard. It is my further hope that parents can exert pressure on their children to desist from smoking marijuana by showing them the results of these studies.

It is my hope that legislators will take greater heed of the dangers of marijuana before considering that this dangerous drug be legalized.

There is indeed hope that education may yet be the forceful pressure to make youngsters and adults aware of this additional and unnecessary threat to the health of their offspring.

A brilliantly conceived television apparatus is being used to teach the deaf to learn to pronounce sounds and words that they have never heard. The instrument, in use at the University of California in Santa Barbara, is called a chromaphone. This device translates sound into readily recognized color patterns on a television screen.

A deaf person can be taught to identify these color patterns and interpret them for use in most ordinary circumstances.

For example, the deaf can be taught to see a pattern on the screen which can be identified with the siren of a fire engine or an ambulance, the barking of a dog or the ringing of a telephone.

It is anticipated that this device may be extremely helpful in addition to the many others now available in training the deaf to speak without impediments.

Progressive near-sightedness, or myopia, may be stopped if the findings of a Viennese eye specialist are correct. Dr. Rolf Habenberger believes that myopia can be checked if the eye glasses are made to exclude or filter out ultraviolet light.

These rays of the sun are the ones that are most intense during the late spring and summer, especially during the hottest part of the day. Dr. Habenberger's statistics are sufficiently encouraging to warrant further exploration of this means of controlling progressive near-sightedness.

Ship Stricken Off Virginia

Coastline

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP)—The 521-foot Panamanian tanker Lagos Erie, racked by an explosion amidships, drifted in flames early today off the Virginia coast after being abandoned by her crew.

The Coast Guard cutters Conifer and Cherokee were expected to arrive at the scene some 60 miles off Cape Henry early today, but a Coast Guard spokesman said reports indicated the Lagos Erie was in imminent danger of sinking.

Five crewmen were airlifted by Coast Guard helicopter from the stricken vessel Friday night and were taken to hospitals in Portsmouth and Norfolk. Four received injuries in the explosion and the fifth suffered burns.

The remaining 25 crewmen abandoned ship shortly before midnight. They were taken aboard the 700-foot tanker Alexandria Conway, which answered the Lagos Erie's initial distress call.

The Lagos Erie radioed the Coast Guard about 8 p.m. Friday that there had been an explosion in her No. 4 hold.

The vessel apparently was quickly engulfed in flames.

The Coast Guard spokesman said the ship was traveling empty and that fumes remaining in the hold apparently set off the blaze.

LOSES 55 POUNDS in 4 Months, Still Slim After 4 Years

Over four years ago, Mrs. Mary Pittenger lost 55 pounds in four months. Four years later she is still slim. How has her life changed? "Well," says the happy Mrs. Pittenger, "I've never had more energy, fun, friends, or pretty clothes. I'm enjoying cooking and eating more than I ever did when I was overweight."

"I followed the 1,000 Calorie Diet of the Conway Diet Institute and lost an average of over 3 pounds a week. There was a great variety — beef, lamb, chicken, veal, turkey, seafood, fruit, vegetables, bread, eggs, cheese, and milk. Thank goodness, fish and liver were not required."

"When I reached my goal weight (125 pounds and a size 8 dress), I was introduced to the Institute's 'Forever Slim' program. I was given a written guideline for eating properly, including some of the 'fattening goodies,' and still keeping my weight down. It's a very practical approach that really works. I know I've been thin now for four years, and expect for the rest of my life to stay 'Forever Slim.' Try it! You'll see!" says Mrs. Pittenger.

Conference Gets War Fund Cutoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference committee will have the task of thrashing out a compromise between a Senate bill that would cut off all funds for U.S. military action in Indochina and a milder House version.

The Senate Thursday voted to cut off all funds for U.S. combat activity in Cambodia and Laos. The House had voted 219 to 188 May 10 to deny any

Drug Institute Bound

INSTITUTE DELEGATES—Westfall High School Guidance Counselor Ed Holmes, far left, stands with the ten juniors who will participate in the 1973 Teenage Institute on Alcohol and Drugs in August. Kneeling are Kelly Steinhauer, Mickey Horn, Rae Fenstermaker; second row, Becki Easterday, Rick Metzger, Bruce Morgan; third row, Jeff Allen, Susan Hillman, Dean Darst and Bill Jacobs.

Ten juniors at Westfall High School will be delegates to the 1973 Teenage Institute on Alcohol and Other Drugs, Ed Holmes announced.

The institute will be held Aug. 12-16 at Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware.

The 10 students—five girls and five boys—are sponsored by community interested clubs, churches and organizations who have donated the $35 registration fee for each student.

Attending the Institute will be: Dean Darst, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Darst, Route 1, Orient, sponsored by the Williamsport branch of the First National Bank; Rick Metzger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cooke Metzger, Route 2, Williamsport, sponsored by the Second National Bank of Circleville;

Bill Jacobs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jacobs, Route 1, Mt. Sterling, sponsored by The Third National Bank of Circleville; Bruce Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morgan, Route 3, Mt. Sterling; sponsored by Star Grange;

Jeff Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gery Johnson, Route 3, Mt. Sterling, sponsored by the Five Points United Methodist Church; Susan Hillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hillman, Route 1, Mt. Sterling, sponsored by the Five Points WCTU;

The purpose of this summer program is to make high school age youth aware of drugs. This program intends to give the students a real, practical knowledge of both drugs and alcohol.

Sessions, which include lectures, "coke" sessions, small group jam sessions and discussion seminars, are aimed at making these students, and through them other students, aware of some of the problems—social, moral and spiritual—which may be connected with the use of and abuse of alcohol and drugs.

Next year, this group of 10 students will be available to speak to elementary schools and the junior and senior high students within this area. They will also speak before clubs, churches or other organizations upon request.

Irish Elections May Bring Trouble

By COLIN FROST
Associated Press Writer

The Irish Republic's surprise choice of English-born Protestant Erskine Childers as president opens the way for a new attack on religious feuding in Northern Ireland, but Childers doubts whether his victory will have any immediate effect.

Terrorists killed two persons in Belfast late Thursday as Northern Ireland held local council elections as a prelude to legislative elections June 28. The Protestant Unionist Party, which has ruled Ulster for 50 years, again held firm control.

More than 88 per cent of the electorate voted in some areas and observers saw this as a defeat for the Irish Republican Army, which had called for a total boycott of the polls.

In his presidential campaign Childers, 68, promised to try to get Northern Ireland's Protestants and Catholics to the conference table in an effort to bring peace to the six counties under British rule.

Despite his religion, his English upbringing and opposition to the Irish Republican Army, Childers is expected to have trouble persuading Ulster Protestants that a Dublin politician can offer a genuine hand of friendship.

Although the Republic's new government has also proclaimed aims of national reconciliation, the new president's personal initiative is limited by the constitutional role of the Irish presidency, which is largely ceremonial and akin to the British monarchy.

Some observers note, however, that such limitations did not prevent King George V from making personal initiatives to solve the Irish question in 1920.

"I would like to use whatever influence I have in establishing a common feeling between the two parts of the country and above all in helping the two communities in the North to get to know each other better," Childers said Thursday.

Childers replaces Eamon de Valera, the 91-year-old founder of Fianna Fail who held the presidency for more than a half century during the stormiest era of Irish politics.

The New York-born de Valera, now fragile and nearly blind, plans to retire to a home for the elderly in suburban Dublin with his 95-year-old wife, Sinead.

funds in a $3.6-billion appropriation bill for any further hostility by the United States in Cambodia.

A majority of Republicans turned against President Nixon's bombing policy as the Senate voted 63 to 19 for the antibombing amendment sponsored by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo. The Senate ban, which applies to all money ever appropriated by Congress for any purpose, was attached to the same $3.6-billion bill.

Administration spokesmen had said that the House action, even if the Senate concurred, would not have stopped the bombing. B52 raids were started in March to force withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, in compliance with the Jan. 27 Vietnam ceasefire agreement, the administration said.

Eagleton said final adoption of his amendment after a House-Senate conference agreement would make any further U.S. combat activity in Cambodia and Laos illegal.

The conference probably will take up the bill next week.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., urged House conferees to remain firm against the all-inclusive Senate fund cutoff.

The Senate action, he said, undercuts presidential assistant Henry A. Kissinger's negotiations with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho. The sessions resume in Paris June 6, as both men seek full compliance with the ceasefire accord.

"You are encouraging further bloodshed in Indochina," Tower told the Senate after the vote Thursday. "Don't think that lives are going to be spared just because we are out of it."

The Senate rejected two modifications of the Eagleton amendment proposed by administration backers who complained it would "tie the hands of the president."

The Eagleton amendment was approved by 43 Democrats and 20 Republicans. Another 16 Republicans and three Democrats voted against it.

The appropriation bill was passed 73 to 5.

Women Turn Out

DEAR ABBY: Since this is anything but complimentary to women I'm sure you won't print it, but I'll write anyway.

When an X-rated movie comes to town, the women flock to see it in droves. Many come by themselves. I'm not referring to just mildly pornographic films, I'm talking about the really rough ones which leave nothing to the imagination.

I've attended such movies and I notice the women's reactions are no different than the men's. Occasionally someone will walk out before the end of the film, but strangely enough it's the women who usually stay until the very end. How do you feel about such movies?

I have always heard and read that women are not turned on by the visual the way men are. If that's true, what are they doing there?

Care to comment?

MADE MY POINT

DEAR MADE: So you've made your point; the point being that you suspect that women are just as "turned on" by the visual as the men are. Could be. But most people flock to X-rated movies (at least once) because they are curious-not necessarily because they want to be "turned on". And if the morals squad would just ignore them instead of staging raids, confiscating film, and arresting exhibitors and patrons, thereby giving these trashy movies millions of dollars worth of free advertising in the press, they would die slow death.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of this situation: A girl of marrying age (18-20) leaves town for an abortion. This is a family secret-or so she thinks. She returns and begins planning a big formal church wedding-white gown, veil, and all.

Are we, her friends who are wise to all this, supposed to act dumb? Should we buy her shower and wedding gifts and dance at her wedding as though

Rare Wine Costs $6,000

ATLANTA, Ga (AP) — A glass of wine for $250?

That's the way the high bid worked out at an auction of rare wines Thursday, when a rehoborn of 1929 Chateau Mouton-Rothschild brought $6,000.

The bid was offered by Richard Kronheim, a wholesale liquor distributor of Washington, D.C., who made the offer by mail. A rehoborn is equal to six 24-ounce European bottles, and his bid averaged $1,000 a bottle or $250 for a six-ounce glass.

Kronheim said in a telephone interview that he doesn't know now what he's going to do with the wine, "but I hope to drink it at some time in the future."

The Mouton-Rothschild, considered among the finest of Chateau wines, is unique because it is almost all that is left of that vintage in that size bottle, said a spokesman for Heublein Inc., Hartford, Conn., which conducted the auction.

Thursday's sales brought a total of $273,500 from nearly 1,000 different buyers who purchased 30,000 bottles altogether.

Brazilian Jet Crash Kills 23

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian jetliner with 23 persons aboard crashed and exploded on landing in the northeast coastal city of Sao Luis today. The Cruzeiro do Sul airline said all were killed.

The airline reported that the two-engine Caravelle "had an accident during a landing operation." It added that the right wing hit the runway after touchdown at the Sao Luis airport.

The plane was on its daily run from Belem at the mouth of the Amazon River, to Rio de Janeiro, with stops along the way.

Quokkas Get Muscle Disease

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Five Rottnest quokkas have been flown from Australia to live at the University of Cincinnati with a colony of nervous goats, nibble vitamin E tablets and help scientists learn about muscular dystrophy.

Quokkas, little kangaroos with short, hairless tails, abound in Australia. But a particular variety is found only on Rottnest Island, 10 miles off the west coast of Australia.

What is special about the Rottnest quokkas is that they develop myotonia, a rare muscle-weakening defect much like muscle diseases in humans.

The quokkas will join a colony of myotonic goats at the university. The "nervous" goats develop a muscle fiber defect that causes them to topple over when they try to move suddenly.

Dr. S. H. Bryant, professor of pharmacology, says he does not know just how myotonia affects the quokkas, although it is known that dystrophy wastes their muscles.

"They become weak and paralyzed, and without vitamin E they would die," Bryant says.

Pirates Outgun Cincy Reds

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steve Blass was able to smile and joke like his old self, despite an erratic pitching performance in which he lasted just six innings and allowed five runs.

He had won a ball game and in the process showed some improvement over the pitcher who entered the game with a huge 7.84 earned run average and a 2-3 record.

"I just didn't throw the ball over the plate tonight," Blass said. "I threw it over the plate with something on it."

His job was good enough to hold Cincinnati close until the Pittsburgh bats exploded. The Pirates went on to defeat the Reds 9-6.

"It's a step in the right direction," said Blass, a 19-game winner last year who was destined for bullpen duty if Friday's outing had been another disaster.

Manager Bill Virdon said he was considering the bullpen for Blass in hopes he might find his problem, especially with his uncharacteristic wildness.

"I think he's coming around a little better," Virdon said. "By that I mean I'm not completely happy yet."

Blass quickly acknowledges that he's not completely happy either. "I still don't have the control I want," he said.

The right-hander said he mowed his lawn during the day to keep his mind off the game.

"The stupid mower quit two or three times on me," he said. "I even missed a couple patches of grass. I guess control is the problem of my life."

Virdon said Blass definitely will stay in the starting rotation for the time being.

"We have to have that guy winning 15, 16 or 17 games if we're going anywhere," the manager said.

The Pirates seem to be going somewhere—toward first place. They have now won five games in a row and have moved to within 3½ games of first-place Chicago in the National League East Division.

Their hitting, which has been the soundest part of their performance this season, was brilliant against the Reds.

Richie Hebner drove in four runs with a homer, double and sacrifice fly and Willie Stargell and Manny Sanguillen added homers. Sanguillen also had a triple.

"It was like a missile range out there tonight," said Cincinnati Manager

Sparky Anderson.

The Reds took a 3-0 lead in the first inning on doubles by Pete Rose and Joe Morgan, a hit batsman and singles by Johnny Bench and Tony Perez.

Sanguillen and Hebner cracked successive homers in the seventh after the Reds had scored two runs in their half of the inning on two singles, a walk, a force out and an error by shortstop Jack Hernandez.

Jim McGlothlin started for the Reds but left after one inning with a pinched nerve in his back. Ed Sprague took over for him and was charged with the loss, his second against no victories.

Blass, now 3-3, was followed to the mound by three other Pirate pitchers. Dave Giusti, who worked the final inning, picked up his sixth save.

The two teams meet again today with Dock Ellis, 4-5, pitching for the Pirates, against the Reds' Jack Billingham, 7-1.

Elsewhere in the National League Friday, Atlanta edged the Cubs 8-7, St. Louis defeated Houston 4-2, San Diego shut out the New York Mets 4-0, Los Angeles nipped Montreal 3-2 and San Francisco beat Philadelphia 2-1.

St. Louis reliever Diego Segui is having a pretty good week. He recorded his eighth save of the season and third this week as the Cardinals trimmed Houston.

Segui came on in the eighth inning with runners on first and second and none out. He struck out Johnny Edwards and Lee May and then retired Tommy Helms to pitch out of the jam and preserve St. Louis' ninth victory in the last 10 games.

Segui heads a bullpen staff that has a string of 30 consecutive scoreless innings covering 22 appearances. Friday's job lowered his earned run average to 1.14.

Atlanta erupted for five runs in the seventh inning, two of them on a home run by Ralph Garr, to defeat the Cubs.

Chicago had built a 7-3 lead on a pair of homers by Billy Williams and one by Ron Santo. The Braves scored a run on Marty Perez' double and Mike Lum's single and then cut the Cubs' lead to 7-6 on Garr's homer.

Dusty Baker walked, stole second and scored on Johnny Oates' single, tying the score. Then a pinch single by Dick Dietz delivered the deciding run.

San Diego used the eight-hit pitching of Bill Greif to beat the New York Mets. The Padres bunched all of their scoring in the first inning against loser Jerry Koosman.

Don Sutton's five-hitter beat Montreal for Los Angeles' seventh straight victory. It was the fourth straight victory for Sutton, 7-3. Joe Ferguson, the National League's runs batted in leader, had one RBI, increasing his total for the season to 43.

Reliever Mac Scarce's wild pitch in the bottom of the eighth inning allowed pitcher Ron Bryant to score San Francisco's winning run against Philadelphia. Bryant had doubled to open the inning. He pitched a four-hitter for the victory.

Unknown Leonard Thompson Leads Kemper Open Clash

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Leonard Thompson, an obscure tour sophomore, considered his first-ever perch atop the pack in the Kemper Open Golf Tournament, smiled and answered a question.

"I don't know how I'll handle it," he said. "I've never led before. I'm just going to do the best I can."

"If it's good enough, then it's good enough," the easy-going, 25-year-old said. "If it's not," he paused and shrugged. "Well, I'll just try it again next week."

Thompson, a relative unknown to the majority of fans but something of a local favorite here, blazed over the 7,219-yard Quail Hollow Country Club layout in a course record-matching 65, seven under par, Friday.

That gave him a 36-hole total of 132—12 under par—and his first lead as a professional. Veteran Ken Still and youthful Lanny Wadkins were two strokes back at 134.

Still chipped in twice en route to a second-round 67 and Wadkins fashioned a solid 68. First-round leader Tom Weiskopf bogeyed two of his last three holes for a 70 and 135.

Former Masters champion Charles Coody was next with a 66—136 as the extremely low scoring continued. It took a score of 144 to qualify for the final two rounds. Over half the field made it.

But some of the game's standouts didn't. Australian Bruce Crampton, winner of three tournaments this year, blew to a 77 for 145. South African Gary Player bogeyed his last hole and missed by a stroke. Masters champion Tommy Aaron had a 74 and missed at 145.

Arnold Palmer had a disappointing 73 but was safely in the final field at 141. Lee Trevino took a 69 for 139.

Libby Knight Wins At Scioto Downs

Libby Knight, a four-year-old trotter owned by Forrest Short of Circleville and Harry Short of Aiken, S.C., won the seventh race at Scioto Downs Friday.

The bay mare trotted the mile in 2:05 to take the winner's share of the $5,000 purse. It was her second win in as many starts this year. The mutual payoff was $4.20, $3 and $2.80. Howard Beissinger was in the sulky. King Storm, owned by Albert and Mrs. Marilla M. Kerns of Stoutsville was second in the ninth race behind Yellow Knife.

Yellow Knife Wins

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Yellow Knife was credited Friday night with his third consecutive victory at Scioto Downs, covering the mile in 2:02 to win the feature trot.

The winner returned $3.80, $3 and $2.20 while King Storm, who placed, paid $4 and $2.40. Haffie Blaze showed for $2.40.

CARROLL RICHTER'S HOROSCOPE

from the Carroll Richter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have considerable more energy now and it is important that you channel it along constructive lines. Acting hastily could upset those most able to give you a hand. Be prepared to accept activities of an unpredictable nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you discuss with kin just what your hopes and wishes are for the future, you get excellent results. Plan how to have more success in the future. Evening is fine for entertaining.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Schedule your activities for today and the rest of the week wisely in the morning. Work on your hobby in the afternoon. Show others that you are proud of your home. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Find the right and most conservative manner in which to add to present abundance. Discuss the future with a financial expert. Do nothing that can start an argument at home.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can benefit greatly now from your traditional way of thinking and acting, so be sure to carry through. Don't permit anyone at home to spoil your plans for the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use your good hunches to get plans working nicely instead of being concerned with making changes. More romance with mate is important now. Take care not to argue with family or friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Go out socially and make a fine impression on others. Show that you are a good conversationalist. You are able to gain a cherished personal aim easily now. Avoid one who is depressive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Engage in some public activity that can give you an opportunity to use your finest talents and bring you acclaim. Make your career more as you wish it to be. Plan a trip tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Obtain as much information as you can from right sources and seek experts for the advice you need. Get the information you need for a trip you have planned. Go to bed early tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go deep into your subconscious for the answers you need to puzzling problems. Your loved one appreciates you tonight. Make plans to have more abundance in new activities. Be calm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Strengthen your association ties so that you have greater mutual success in the future. Avoid a friend who is not acting just right. Take some time for catching up with your reading.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Once you have attended services of your choice, schedule your work and activities for the new week. Don't act in an erratic way or you lose the respect of others. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Attend amusements you enjoy instead of taking risks with the unknown. Put your special talents to work. You can become a far more popular person than you've been in a long time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those practical young people who should do well in the field of merchandising, and it would be wise to direct the education along such lines. There is a tendency toward a martyr complex here, so when things go wrong, teach to rise above such things. Give a good spiritual training early in life. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

OHIO WEATHER SUMMARY
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Most of Ohio should be sunny and warm today with a chance of showers or thundershowers in the western part of the state, according to the National Weather Service.

Highs today will be in the 70s and low 80s with a chance of showers or thundershowers increasing to over most of the state Saturday night.

Showers that threatened the northwestern corner of the state Friday night moved eastward during early Saturday morning which brought calm weather over the state.

Shallow fog formed early Saturday morning along the Ohio River but the fog was expected to dissipate with the morning sun.

At daybreak temperatures were mostly in the 50s ranging from 49 at Marietta to 60 at Mansfield.

The weather map Saturday morning showed a cold front from New York State across southern Michigan to central Minnesota. This front is moving southeastward and will move southward across the northeast and extreme northern parts of the state before becoming stationary Saturday night. Temperatures are expected to level off in the 70s to the north of the front Saturday afternoon with readings in the lower 80s likely in the southern part of the state.

A developing low center just east of the north Rockies has begun to draw warm humid air northward from the gulf of Mexico and showers and thunderstorms have broken out in the Plains states. This may bring showers to the state on Sunday.

Charismatic Renewal Meeting Draws 20,000 Roman Catholics

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Under the elm trees and in campus dormitories, a vast gathering of Roman Catholics has been caught up in what they consider a rolling tide of the spirit.

"Jesus is with us," they called out. "Thank you, Lord."

It was an annual conference on charismatic renewal of the church and more than 20,000 persons showed up for its opening Friday night in the University of Notre Dame Stadium, twice the number of 1972.

Fishing War Could Spread AroundGlobe

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — To British fishermen, Iceland's 50-mile limit is outrageous.

But it may be a taste of things to come as one coastal country after another stakes claims to what were once regarded as the high seas.

At least six Latin American countries, including Brazil and Argentina, have proclaimed 200-mile territorial waters. Guinea, on the west coast of Africa, claims a 130-mile wide coastal strip, Gabon 100 miles.

Many other countries have posted exclusive fishing or economic zones far offshore. They include Chile, Costa Rica, Nicaragua and Peru, with 200 miles; India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka with 112 miles; Ghana, 100 miles, and Morocco, 70 miles.

Canadian Environment Minister Jack Davis said last weekend his country plans to claim exclusive fishing rights over its entire continental shelf, in some places wider than 200 miles. This would take in the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, traditional fishing grounds for the United States and many other countries.

Three miles, the traditional territorial limit, is recognized today by a dwindling number of countries, including the United States. Iceland and many others maintain that there is nothing in international law to stop a country from claiming more.

Iceland refuses to accept jurisdiction of the World Court in its fishing dispute with Britain. It says the court has no law under which to rule.

This may change as a result of world conferences on the law of the sea planned for Geneva in July, New York in November, and Santiago, Chile, next April.

Some 90 participating nations hope to write new maritime conventions reconciling the interests of major powers, coastal nations, the affluent, the needy and the landlocked.

Stolen Michigan Car Is Recovered

A 1968 Cadillac stolen from east Detroit, Mich., was recovered early this morning by Highway Patrolman Mike R. Everhart.

Everhart stopped the vehicle, driven by Thomas J. Saari, 25, of Warren, Mich., at 2 a.m. today on Route 23 at Radcliffe Road after clocking it in excess of the highway speed limit. His check on the car's registration showed that it had been taken from a Detroit suburb in February and subsequent search of the auto turned up a marijuana cigarette.

Saari and a passenger, William G. Stewart, 23, were placed under arrest by the officer for auto larceny and possession of marijuana. They were placed in the city jail.

This arrest earns Ptl. Everhart his second blue lightning bolt in the 1973 Patrol campaign to cut down on automobile thefts in Ohio.

Columbus Driver Cited In Accident

A citation for failing to maintain assured clear distance between his vehicle and the car ahead was given to Joseph M. Phillips, 57, of Columbus Friday following a 3:15 p.m. accident at the DuPont Road intersection on Route 23.

Phillips was unable to stop and struck the rear of an auto driven by a 71-year-old New Boston woman, Lena Stone, who had halted her car for the traffic signal. The Highway Patrol reports Mrs. Stone suffered light injuries which did not require treatment.

"God is moving by his spirit," they chanted, eyes closed, holding their hands heavenward. "Move, oh Lord, in me."

Gold-streaked clouds of sunset overhead faded into dark and their pentecostal-type songs and melodious praying filled the air like surging currents into the morning hours.

The huge crowd came from throughout the nation and abroad, old couples, youngsters packing bedrolls and guitars, nuns, priests, some bishops and numerous Protestants. Between brief scripture readings and messages, a hush would descend over the assembly followed by soft, murmurous praying like a massive hum, gradually rising into a great outpouring of song-like prayers that somehow blended harmoniously.

This was the sound of the "praying in unknown tongues," a phenomenon characteristic of the movement, and it flowed together like synchronized improvisations of some inspired jazz band.

"It's a very exciting time to see the fire of the holy spirit sweeping across the earth," said the Rev. George W. Kosicki of the Charismatic Renewal Service Committee here, which helps guide the unofficial movement.

It started among Roman Catholic college students in 1966 after emerging earlier in many major Protestant denominations.

Address Correction

In Friday's municipal court news, Harold Haddox's address was listed as 338 Walnut St. According to the police record, it should have been 223 N. Washington St.

airline workers removed the casket of Baker from a plane Friday.

Today, Baker gets his last wish. He'll be buried in Hamilton, Ohio, at the side of his wife Shirley.

Their four orphaned children—ages 14, 11, 10 and seven—saw their prayers answered this week when a news media-sponsored fund drive in San Francisco raised money to have them and their father's body returned home.

Baker, a longtime truck driver, died May 24 in San Francisco, where the family made its home after years of traveling from city to city.

"He started drinking real heavy when Shirley got cancer about four years ago," said Elmer Garrett, brother of Mrs. Baker. "When she died last year, he just sort of gave up."

Elmer, 31, and his brother John, 30, have legal action planned to establish guardianship of the four children.

But transcending the story of love and death is the courageous figure of Baker's oldest daughter, Marie, 14.

The long-haired junior high student faced the tragedy calmly and with direction.

She fought back instinctively. She and her three brothers needed help and a home.

She called a San Francisco television station and made a public appeal that sparked a wave of assistance, including money.

Her father's last wish was to join his dead wife in an Ohio cemetery. Three funeral homes in San Francisco provided services at no cost. A fourth, in Hamilton, Ohio, is handling the funeral.

"This just doesn't seem possible," said Elmer Garrett, a paper company employee in Hamilton, a city of 70,000.

"All the credit goes to Marie," he said, "and the media for helping.

"We had come up with enough money to get the kids back here, but we were going to have to borrow more to have the body shipped back," he said.

"I was ready to sell my car," Garrett said.

"We've been through this before," he said. "When Shirley had cancer we pitched in with extra money to help bring her body back."

Elmer and his wife have four children. John has three.
